NEWS | POSTED FEBRUARY 21, 2018

University of Florida launches New Ph.D. Program

The University of Florida's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences just started a Ph.D. program that takes a prevention science approach to understanding how the world we live in and how the people in our lives can help our youth and strengthen families. The Ph.D. program in Youth Development and Family Sciences prepares graduates to compete for tenure-track faculty positions in academic departments specializing in human development and family science, prevention science, youth development, and family and consumer sciences, as well as elite post-doctoral experiences, or careers in the government, nonprofit, or private sectors.

Read about the program here:
https://www.naplesnews.com/story/opinion/2018/02/09/commentary-uf-program-uses-social-science-search-prevention/317261002/

For more information, visit:
http://fycs.ifas.ufl.edu/phd-program/